MUSICAM SACRAM

Historical Context of Sacred Music: 17th Century (continued...)

To read previous articles, visit <https://www.stjosephcolumbia.org/davids-blog>

In the mid-to-late 17th century the sacred concerto, driven by the addition of instrumental accompaniment, continued to develop. Composers like Monteverdi and Giovanni Gabrieli in Italy, Marc-Antoine Charpentier in France, and Heinrich Schütz in Germany all wrote larger-scale works. These sacred concertos, religious in nature but not always written for use in sacred liturgy, adopted theatrical elements of opera. Composers combined instrumental accompaniment by a small instrumental ensemble (organ, cello, or harpsichord) with solo singers and small choral ensembles. These sacred concertos could be texts from psalms, vespers, prayers, Masses, biblical stories, etc., and could be divided into many different parts, which are called movements.

Orazio Benevoli (1605-1672) was a key composer in 17th-century Catholic sacred music. He wrote many sacred concertos in Italy and much of his music was written for St. Peter's in Rome during the 17th century. Other composers like Lodovico Viadana (1560-1627) wrote shorter works that were often used in Catholic Cathedrals in Italy. Here at St. Joseph, our Schola cantorum sings Viadana's music. Type "Lodovico da Viadana Exsultate justi" to hear a work of Viadana that you might hear during liturgies at St. Joseph!

During the same time in France, Marc-Antoine Charpentier was one of the most prolific composers of both sacred and secular music working for Louis XIV. Charpentier wrote both large and smaller sacred works that combine elements of polyphony, solo singing, and the new techniques of the Baroque. One of his most well-known works is his Midnight Mass for Christmas. To listen, type "Marc-Antoine Charpentier Messe de minuit H.9, Marc Minkowski" into YouTube. More next week!

FROM THE ORGAN BENCH

Cardinal Newman Organ Academy student, Marshall Seezen, was one of six performers in an organ master class conducted by Dr. Janette Fishell of the Jacobs School of Music, Indiana University Bloomington. Dr. Fishell is chair of the organ department at Indiana State University. The master class was held at Incarnation Lutheran Church in Columbia on the newly installed Flentrop tracker pipe organ. Four students were high school age. Two others were college + years old. In a debriefing with Marshall, he remarked, "I didn't know there would be that many people there!" According to Brad Cunningham, instructor of organ at Cardinal Newman, "Marshall outdid himself. He performed extraordinarily well. The school was well-represented! I am proud of him."

WATCH

WHO AM I TO JUDGE? WITH DR. EDWARD SRI - SESSION 1: DON'T IMPOSE YOUR MORALITY ON ME!

What is “right” and “wrong”? Is what’s right for you right for me? These are difficult questions to discuss in our culture. We live in a society that supports the opinion that each person should make up his or her own morality, that there is no moral truth that applies to everyone. So, how do we talk about right and wrong in this world? In this series, Dr. Ted Sri explores the fragility of a relativist outlook and the importance of absolute truth.
